history of the celts in 20 objects

The Celts are defined linguistically, and yet we are able to associate a vast collection of objects, decorative and utilitarian, with Celtic culture over more than two millennia. An attempt to define the history of the Celts through such a small sample as twenty objects is doomed to failure. Rather, this study day seeks to touch on some of the more intriguing aspects of Celtic culture though the objects that are associated with it.

In examining our twenty objects, we will also glance quickly at some additional objects that did not make the cut. We will talk about what makes an object Celtic, what is special about each object, and how it represents a particular aspect of Celtic culture. Each object will be illustrated with a range of photographs.

Australian School of Celtic Learning

Founded in December 2017 by Dr Pamela O'Neill, the Australian School of Celtic Learning is a community-oriented educational venture. Our vision is for a world where everyone has affordable and accessible opportunities to learn about the Celtic cultures. We present the latest and best research in the field of Celtic learning to all of our students, whether their interest is genealogical, spiritual, historical or linguistic.

Topics for our programmes range widely over topics of Celtic interest, with a particular focus on the early medieval period, and on medieval and modern Celtic languages.
